DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Applicant's election without traverse of Species I (figures 1 and 2; claims 1-3 and 6-7) in the reply filed on November 22nd, 2004 is acknowledged.

Specification

Applicant is reminded of the proper language and format for an abstract of the disclosure.

The abstract should be in narrative form and generally limited to a single paragraph on a separate sheet within the range of 50 to 150 words. It is important that the abstract not exceed 150 words in length since the space provided for the abstract on the computer tape used by the printer is limited. The form and legal phraseology often used in patent claims, such as "means" and "said," should be avoided. The abstract should describe the disclosure sufficiently to assist readers in deciding whether there is a need for consulting the full patent text for details.

The language should be clear and concise and should not repeat information given in the title. It should avoid using phrases which can be implied, such as, "The disclosure concerns," "The disclosure defined by this invention," "The disclosure describes," etc.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-3 and 6-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Hess et al. US Patent No. 6,196,219. Referring to claim 1, Hess discloses a liquid droplet spray device for an inhaler suitable for respiratory therapies that comprises micro-dosing device 5 with a dosing chamber 9 for the at least partial reception of a liquid quantity and with which is associated at least one discharge opening 14, as well as with a vibrating unit 10 in operative connection with at least one boundary surface of the dosing chamber in order to vibrate the same for discharge process, and with a delivery function unit, connected to the vibrating unit 10, for activating the latter during a delivery time period, wherein in addition a drying function unit is provided (see column 7 lines 15-25), which can be activated in time separated manner with respect to the delivery function unit in order to remove liquid residues from the dosing chamber (see figures 2 through 5).

Referring to claim 2, Hess discloses an apparatus wherein the drying function unit is connected to the vibrating unit in order to activate the latter for a drying process (see column 6 lines 62-67 and column 7 lines 1 through 25).

Referring to claim 3, Hess discloses an apparatus wherein the delivery function unit and drying function unit are parts of a common electronic control device, which is provided with a time function element for coordinating the time separated activating processes of the vibrating unit by the delivery function unit and the drying function unit (see figure 5 and column 7 lines 1 through 45).

Referring to claim 6, Hess discloses a liquid droplet spray device for an inhaler suitable for respiratory therapies that comprises method for dosing small liquid quantities by the vibration of at least one boundary surface of a dosing chamber 9 by activating and deactivating a vibrating unit 10, wherein the vibrating unit 10 is activated for a delivery time period for the discharge of the liquid quantity and is then deactivated and after deactivating the vibrating unit 10 liquid residues remaining in the dosing chamber are removed therefrom by a drying process (see figures 2 through 5 and column 6 and 7).

Referring to claim 7, Hess discloses a method wherein the vibrating unit 10 is again activated over a drying time period for the drying process.
